Activities

AAPG

AMU Poznan Student Chapter of the AAPG allows its members to gain professional experience in the broadly defined field of petroleum geoscience through participation in workshops, lectures and projects. Other benefits include opportunities of taking part in international conferences, courses, access to renowned publications, participation in the Imperial Barrel Award competition as well as undergraduate and graduate grant programs.

In other words, the membership provides students with the invaluable skills and knowledge to pursue their future careers in the oil and gas industry.

We are eager to cooperate with research institutions, petroleum companies and other student chapters in Poland and other countries.

We also organize geologic workshops for schools.

Willing to cooperate?

We put strong emphasis on fieldwork, hence places such as drill rigs and core warehouses are commonly visited by us. Our members present their papers and posters during both student and professional conferences.

We also organize annual high-class workshops during the Festival of Art and Science and the Night of Scientists.

American Association of Petroleum Geologists is an international organization founded in 1917 and uniting students and professionals from the petroleum industry.
